LAS VEGAS, NV – The Holidays are here and 'Tis the Season of Giving! Baby's Bounty, a local charity that gives all year long, is receiving their own gift this year. Graphic Imaging Services, Inc. (GISI) is donating an Epson Document Scanner to the organization that provides for expecting families in need. The Las Vegas based charity, Baby's Bounty, provides essential items and baby gear to families that need assistance to give "a good start for every baby."

As a local small business GISI tries to engage and get involved with the community as much as possible. Known for holding training events and information sessions, GISI helps businesses across Las Vegas manage their document chaos and records information. When the Nevada Public Records Act went into effect in October of this year, Baby's Bounty faced a difficult task of digitizing all of their archived records to accommodate the ordinance.

Baby's Bounty found themselves with a bit of a problem organizing their records, using a flatbed scanner to input their documents. Scanning one page at a time took far too long for the charity workers, who were already stretched thin with the workload they were given. For them, paperwork was getting in the way of giving. That's when Graphic Imaging Services, Inc. stepped in to help.

Over the summer, GISI lent Baby's Bounty an Epson WorkForce DS-860 color document scanner, worth $800 retail price, to replace their HP DeskJet 3755. While the HP DeskJet makes a great personal scanner for home use, it was no comparison to the speed and accuracy GISI knew they could provide. "It's important to us to give back to the community, especially those helping the community," says Graphic Imaging Services owner and president, Lisa Desautels.

As the year comes to an end, GISI questioned how they could do more for Las Vegas families. The company has decided to gift the scanner to Baby's Bounty in an effort to lessen paperwork and allow the charity to focus on what really matters – taking care of our community.
