LAS VEGAS, NV – The Holidays are here and 'Tis the Season of Giving! Graphic Imaging Services, Inc. (GISI) is donating office grade scanners to the community. Baby's Bounty and Catholic Charities of Southern Nevada will both be receiving color document scanners from GISI, at no cost to them.

As a local small business GISI tries to engage and get involved with the community as much as possible. Known for holding training events and information sessions, GISI helps businesses across Las Vegas manage their document chaos and records information. When the Nevada Public Records Act went into effect in October of this year, many Nevada businesses faced a difficult task of digitizing all of their archived records to accommodate the ordinance.

In the case of Baby's Bounty, they found themselves with a bit of a problem organizing their records, using a flatbed scanner to input their documents. Scanning one page at a time took far too long for the charity workers, who were already stretched thin with the workload they were given. For them, paperwork was getting in the way of giving.

Catholic Charities reached out when they realized their documents were deteriorating. Archiving records for adoption, work assistance, community programs and more, Catholic Charities operates 16 programs, all of which are funded through the generosity of foundations, grants, and donors. Missing records could result in fines for the organization, which is money better spent on those in need.

"It's important to us to give back to the community, especially those helping the community," says Graphic Imaging Services owner and president, Lisa Desautels. As the year comes to an end, GISI questioned how they could do more for Las Vegas families. The company has decided to gift each charity organization a scanner in an effort to lessen paperwork and allow the charity. "This is for all of Las Vegas. This is for the families that need help. We hope each organization can get back to focusing on what matters – taking care of the community,” says office administrator, Kris Santoro.

Baby’s Bounty will be receiving an Epson WorkForce DS-860 color document scanner, worth over $700 retail price. Catholic Charities will be receiving a Fujitsu SnapScan fi-6010N, worth over $1900. These charities that give all year long will receive their own gifts this year, with warm gratitude from Graphic Imaging Services, Inc. for the outstanding work they provide.
